WUSD continuation high school loses accreditation

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

The continuation high school in West Sacramento's school district has lost its accreditation – a factor which may affect some of its students who transfer to other schools or go on to college.

The Accrediting Commission for Schools notified Yolo High School last month that accreditation was being pulled after a June visit to the campus. The school is the district's main alternative high school to River City High School, geared towards those who aren't successful under the structure of RCHS.

Interim Principal Mort Geivett, who has since taken up the top job at Yolo High, said he hopes the school will earn back accreditation this school year. In the meantime, said Geivett, some students at Yolo could suffer some trouble over the lack of accreditation.

"Continuation schools really do not have to be accredited," explained Geivett. "Yolo High has been accredited in the past. The seriousness of this (loss) kicks in when students go from Yolo High to an accredited comprehensive high school such as River City High, or to McClatchy, over in Sacramento. The accredited school over again."

Likewise, a four-year college or university might not count classes taken at Yolo High School towards their admission requirements, and some college aid might not be made available to graduates of a non-accredited school. But students from Yolo High will still meet the broad admission requirements of community colleges. And the school can continue to issue diplomas, said Geivett.

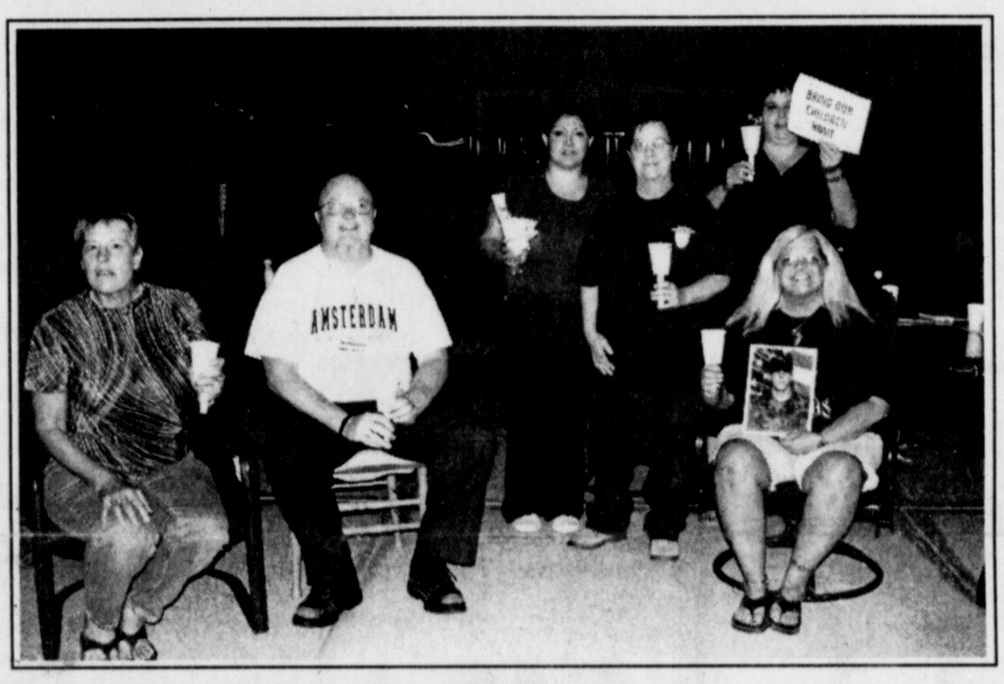
He said that the accreditation committee felt the school had not made enough progress on several fronts since the committee's last visit.

"One issue was whether our courses of study used curriculum-based, standards-based education," said Geivett. "They also looked at our data collection system – how are our kids doing on the STAR test, on exit exam tests, on attendance, and on graduation rates. Not only were we not collecting the data, we weren't analyzing it to see how we could improve – because we didn't have the data. If we had a high suspension rate, drop-out rate or truancy rate, we couldn't make a decision how to improve it."

The committee also felt the school needed to create consistency of grading between different classes, better pursue all available funding, and make other improvements, he added. On the "plus" side, noted Geivett, the committee said the school was doing a good job in such areas as ensuring students had good access to counselors and in improving faculty communication.

Geivett said he will be starting the accreditation application process "all over again" and hopes for a revisit from the accreditation committee in March or April. If the school is fortunate enough to receive accreditation before the school year is out, he said, then the work of Yolo High students performed this academic year could receive full "accredited" value.

Vigil: end Iraq war



By Daryl Fisher
Features Editor

A candlelight vigil in support of Cindy Sheehan and the withdrawal of American troops in Iraq was held last Wednesday evening in the Southport home of Linda Copeland. The vigil was one of 1,700 held across the nation that night.

"We were able to share our common concerns and thoughts about the escalating violence in Iraq," said Amanda Ridge, who participated in the vigil. "It was encouraging to all of us who live here and are opposed to the war in Iraq that such an event was being held in West Sacramento and hopefully this will be only the beginning of more organized communication and support efforts in our area."

Sheehan, who is from Vacaville, lost her son, Casey, in the Iraq war and is the founder of Gold Star Families for Peace. She and her supporters have set up camp along the road leading to President Bush's ranch in Crawford, Texas, trying to obtain a face to face meeting with the president. The nationwide candlelight vigil was organized to support her efforts to speak with President Bush and to also bring attention to the growing dissatisfaction with the war felt by those participating in the event.

Foundation raises $100k

'Casino night' at Raley Field helps start endowment for schools

A new foundation formed to support local schools seems to have rolled "double-sixes" at a casino-style fundraiser Thursday night – raising more than $100,000 for charity.

"Our goal for the first year was to raise $100,000 between the sponsorships and the people attending the event," said Terri L. Davis, the local certified public accountant who chaired the "Home Run for Schools" fundraiser held at Raley Field. "We exceeded that – although I can't tell you by how much, yet."

When all the bills are paid and all he money is counted, organizers will have a more exact picture of the proceeds. The money raised will then be split evenly into two piles. The new West Sacramento Education Foundation will use half of the money to support local school programs now, and put the other half into an endowment fund designed to address future school needs.

"The interest from that endowment will be used for the same things, but annually," said Davis.

The Raley Field event featured casino-style gambling, with $100 tickets earning each of the 350 attendees $100 of fake casino chips, plus a dinner. Winners didn't walk away with cash, but did get bragging rights and raffle tickets.

The city's mayor, Christopher Cabaldon, happened to win a tournament of about 20 people playing "Texas Hold 'Em," no-limit poker. Always known for playing his cards close to the vest, Cabaldon cleaned out his poker rivals. And at the "high rollers" tables, featuring local politicians and other notables as dealers, school board member Mary Leland dealt the cards and saw her table take honors for most "money" won. She got a trophy.

The foundation is a non-profit group that sprung from interest among members of the Chamber of Commerce.

Major sponsors to the "Home Run for Schools" casino event included developers such as Grupe, Richland, KB Homes, University Park, Seecon and Summit. Other sponsors included PG&E, ASB Properties, Turner Construction, DLR Group, Terry L. Davis and her partnership, IKEA and the West Sacramento Land Company.

West Sac singer earns Yolo title

Vela, 21, earned the check by singing "I Will Survive" and topping the performances of 19 total contestants in the fair's "Yolo Idol Search" competition. She was accompanied by family members. On Sept. 9, Vela will represent the county in competition against winners from nine other fairs. The winner will take home $3,000.

Driver lost control due to heart failure

A West Sacramento man whose car went into the barge canal near the Daniel C. Palamidessi Bridge on August 15 died of natural causes, according to an autopsy performed last week.

A spokesman for the Yolo County Coroner's office told the News-Ledger that 58-year old Will Earby was felled by heart disease early that Monday morning. After Earby was stricken, the car he was driving veered off of Lake Washington Boulevard. There were no other passengers.

A nearby motorist with a cell phone reported the accident.

Dogs sought: biting incident raises concern about rabies

Yolo County Health Department officials are looking for help in locating two dogs involved with a biting incident in West Sacramento's Southport area on August 14.

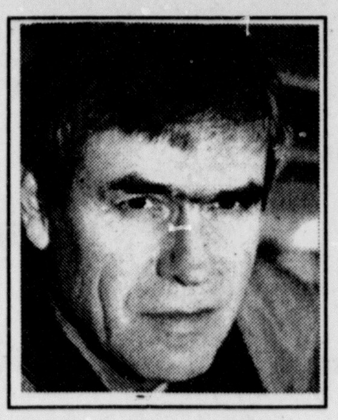
Women don't seem to care about clean cars

Editor's note: Daryl is out of town this week on vacation. Below is one of his favorite columns from the past:

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

This past Saturday, I was standing out in my driveway getting ready to leisurely scrub my truck from top to bottom when my daughter suddenly wheeled her car up behind mine and slammed on the brakes.

"Can't you please pull into the driveway a little bit slower?" I asked her as politely as I could as she climbed out from behind her steering wheel. "Don't you know your front tires are going to get all out of alinement if you keep slamming them into the curb like that?"

"So, what are you up to, Dad?" she asked, ignoring my question.

"I'm obviously washing my truck."

"Why?"

"Because it's dirty."

"It doesn't look dirty to me."

"Are you kidding? It's filthy."

"It is not."

"It is so!"

"Well, even if it was," she said, "it's just going to get dirty all over again the minute you back it out of the driveway."

"But that's not the point."

"Then what is the point?" she asked with what appeared to be genuine interest.

"The point is quite simple," I tried to explain. "My truck is filthy and it needs to be washed. If I don't do it now, it's just going to keep getting dirtier and dirtier. And unlike you, I don't wait to wash my car until someone has to write `Please Wash Me' on it with their finger before I finally get around to doing it."

"But don't you realize how anal that is, Dad -- to always have to be washing your car? Nope, I think my approach to car washing is much more healthy than yours."

"And what approach is that?"

"I wait for rain."

"It's August!"

Then she proudly glanced over at the dirtiest motor vehicle in West Sacramento and said, "Well, it looks fine to me."

"But how can you say that? It's still covered with the same bird crap that's been on it for months. Do you know the kind of damage that does to a paint job?"

As my daughter and I continued to exchange verbal punches, I found myself wondering just what it is that prevents most women from experiencing that great inner calm (I think it's a form of bliss, actually) which comes over most men when they know for certain that they are driving around in a truly clean vehicle? And why is it that even those women who do keep their cars reasonably clean prefer to have them washed at one of those trendy professional places, where uncaring minimum wage workers charge a small fortune to keep unsuspecting customers from ever discovering the real joys of car washing? Or worse yet, one of those awful automated places where modern technology and speed take every ounce of fun out of properly bathing one's own vehicle.

"Dad," said my daughter, shaking my arm, "you're not listening to me."

"I'm sorry," I said, wondering if women will ever understand that cars actually run better after they've been washed, "what did you say?"

"I said, if you're going to insist on standing out here and washing a perfectly clean truck, you might as well go ahead and wash my car, too -- if you want."

"Hey, I know what," I said eagerly, "why don't you grab a couple of towels out of the garage and we'll wash our cars together. How's that? We'll have ourselves some quality father-daughter time together. It'll be fun! I'll even show you how it's done."

"You mean there's actually a technique involved?" she asked with a smile.

"Of course there is," I said, stepping over to my daughter's car with her. "To begin with, you don't want the water too hot and you don't want to leave the soap on too long -- especially on hot days like this. And you always want to start with the roof and work your way down."

"Why do I have to start at the top? Can't I just begin at the bottom if I want?"

Before I could explain to my daughter that washing a car from the bottom up was completely out of the question, I made the mistake of glancing through the driver's window and into the interior of her car. "My God! I shouted in horror.

"What's the matter now?" asked my daughter with alarm.

"I don't think I've ever seen anything quite like that in my whole life," I finally managed to say, still not believing my eyes.

"What?"

"The inside of your car!" I exclaimed as I took a deep breath and bravely bent at the waste to get a closer look.

There was garbage and assorted junk scattered absolutely everywhere, including empty Diet Coke and Dr. Pepper cans, Burger King and McDonalds' cheeseburger wrappers, dozens of wadded up Kleenex tissues, old lipstick and eye mascara containers, used straws, discarded pens and pencils, books and old college exam papers yellowed by the sun, coins of every size and denomination, paper clips, gym socks in need of a good wash, and even a couple of combs big enough that they could probably be used to successfully fight off a car highjacker.

"Just what is wrong with the inside of my car?" my daughter demanded to know.

"Well, to begin with," I said, "it looks like a homeless person has been living in there!"

"It does not."

"Carrie," I pleaded from my hopelessly male point of view, "you've just got to learn how to properly take care of your car. The inside of a car is a sacred place. It's a person's home away from home. It's where you listen to great music, think really profound thoughts, make love for the first time, have long conversations with yourself, and hide from all the problems of the real world. You have to keep it clean -- even cleaner than the outside of your car."

"Well," said my daughter, "if you ask me, the inside of my car looks just fine."

"No, no, no it doesn't! It looks like the inside of a giant scary purse!"

"So, what are you saying -- that I'm a slob?"

"Yes!"

"Well, you're the one who raised me! Plus now I have to go through my entire life knowing my father had sex in a car!

"At least it was a clean car!"

SPORTS INSIDER

By Richard Novoa

The second week of the Niners preseason was sadden by the death of Thomas Herrion. The 23-year old man, who grew up in Fort Worth, Texas with big dreams of playing in the NFL collapsed in the locker room after playing most of the fourth quarter in Denver. Herrion is the second professional football player to die this year while playing football, Actually "Big T", who is 6-foot-7 and 340 pounds, died after game in the locker room following the team prayer.

In April Al Lucas died from a spinal cord injury suffered in an Arena Football game. There have been several other deaths related to football over the years but the cause of Herrion's death will take several weeks to confirm. Playing in the altitude of the "Mile High" city and a family history of heart problems might have contributed to his unfortunate death.

On a brighter note in San Francisco- there has been a Barry Bonds sighting! Yes, Mr. Bonds could join the Giants before the end of the month. The G-Men have been struggling all season without Bonds but only trail the division leading Padres by 6 games with 39 ball games remaining. Maybe the Giants will use Bonds to pitch in the ninth inning!

NFL News

The Oakland Raiders build up a first half 17-7 lead in Texas only to watch the second and third stringers lose the game 19-17. Kerry Collins looked sharp completing 14 out of 18 tosses for 191 yards and two touchdowns. The Raiders offense fell asleep in the second half and the defense only allowed four field goals but that's all it took for the Texans to win at home.

The 49ers lost their first game of the young season 26-21 to the Broncos in the mile high city of Denver. Alex Smith faired a little better that last week but he still looked rough fading back for a pass. The offensive line is still a major problem for the Niners. I don't care who starts a QB; the man is still going to need pass protection.

Local Sac. State boy, Fred Amey, caught two passes for 21 yards and was very active on the kickoff teams. Amey holds most of the Hornets all-time pass receiver records. Coach Nolan really likes his game and always talks about his playing attitude. Amey will beat the odds and make the 49ers opening day roster.

This week the Raiders will host the Phoenix Cardinals (6:30 p.m.-ch.31) on Friday and the 49ers will also play at home on Friday night (7 p.m.-ch.13) against the Tennessee Titans.

Major League Baseball

I think I put the jinx of the Oakland A's (68-55) season. The last week all I talked about is how great the A's were playing baseball then all of the sudden the lowly Kansas City Royals came to Oak Town. The Royals couldn't beat my co-ed softball team. The Royals, who hadn't won a game in August, ended their 19-game losing streak in Oakland. Their last win was on July 27th.

Anyway, they won two out of three against the A's and knocked them in second place in the West and dropped them closer to the Yankees, Indians, Twins and Blue Jays in the wild card race. The A's will hit the road to Detroit and Baltimore this week in hopes of picking up some games on the division leading Angels.

The Giants (55-69) continue to stink up the Western Division but still trail the Padres by 6 games. Now that I think about it they are only two games out of second place and 1 game behind those Dodgers. Ok, I'm reaching!

The Giants placed closer Tyler Walker on the DL be-

The department reports that at about 5:45 p.m. on that Sunday, two dogs bit a man at a park near Oakland Bay and Martinique. Raider cheerleaders win at camp

From River City High School

The River City Cheerleaders recently returned from a National Cheerleaders Association summer camp. The camp was held at UC Davis and attracted over 200 cheerleaders from the surrounding Northern California area.

While there, the River City Cheerleaders received the following awards:

National Championship Bid Winner, which is awarded to the team Bid Winner exemplifying the best technical skill and cheerleading technique; Top Team Winner, a competition on the last day of camp with a cheer that was learned during the week; and Spirit Stick Winner, which is presented to the squads showing sincere spirit and enthusiasm throughout the entire week of camp (both the Jr. Varsity and Varsity squads at River City won the last two awards).

Also, 20 River City Cheerleaders were selected as All-American Nominees. These are outstanding individuals who display strength in cheer motions and technique, leadership ability, and/or overall attitude at camp. Of the members who received the above nomination, 7 were elected to the "All-American Team", a prestigious award judged on motion technique, jumps, tumbling, spirit and enthusiasm, voice projection and overall crowd appeal.

With the awards received, all squad members are eligible to perform at an NCA Special Event, like the Fed Ex Orange Bowl or the Hula Bowl. This year, several River City Cheerleaders are beginning to fundraise to assist them in attending the Hula Bowl in Hawaii in January. Anyone interested in sponsoring can contact Leslie Pruitt, RCHS Cheer Advisor at 417-4722.

A high school reported to police that two students were being held in the office. One was in possession of BB-gun ammunition, and the other had fireworks.

Aug. 19, 2:05 p.m.

An officer contacted a 44-year old homeless man at a makeshift camp. The man was on parole, and a search turned up a nine-inch kitchen knife as well as a credit card under another person's name. The parolee was arrested, and the officer stated he would follow up on the credit card issue.

A man told police he had argued with his girlfriend yesterday, and she had assaulted him, hit him and thrown shoes at him.

A citizen on Smilax Avenue reported that an older mid-sized car had swiped a van and then hit the caller's car, pushing it up on the sidewalk. The suspect car then fled towards Lisbon Street. Police found the car broken down, and contacted a woman removing items from it. She said she only knew the driver's first name.

Aug. 21, 7:13 a.m.

A man reported hearing his car being driven away from a Westacre Road address. He and his brother pursued the car and saw it lose control and hit a tree on Michigan Boulevard. Deputy praised for saving horse

A Yolo County Deputy Sheriff this month earned the "Compassionate Law Enforcement Award" from the People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals. The award was given to Deputy Sheriff Jerry Lazaro at a sheriff's department ceremony.

Lazaro rescued a horse from a burning barn in rural Yolo County on June 6.

A suspect had begun firing shots, shooting several horses inside the barn on County Road 24, and then lit the barn on fire. The suspect and arriving officers exchanged gunfire, and Lazar saw the barn burning, said a department press release.

Hearing a horse in distress inside the burning building, Lazaro got the stall door open in time for the horse to escape – burning his own hands in the process.

Lazaro's previous awards include a Silver Star for Bravery in the rescue of a drowning child from the Sacramento River in 2003.

How to dispose of a dead bird

Due to the increasing numbers of deceased birds caused by the influx of the West Nile Virus, the Yolo County Sheriff's Department of Animal Services has released the following advisory:

With people unsure of who to contact regarding the increasing number of deceased birds caused by the West Nile Virus, the Animal Services Section has had an increase in calls for service by as many as one hundred per day. With the assistance of the Yolo County Environmental Health Department and Yolo County Planning and Public Works, it has been approved for private residences to place small deceased animals such as birds, rats, or mice in their residential garbage cans as an accepted method of disposal.

It is recommended by officials you not handle deceased animals with exposed hands, but rather use gloves and place the animal into a plastic bag which can be sealed or tied shut and then placed in your garbage can. There is however, one exception which are bats. If you should find a deceased bat, please contact Animal Services for disposal due to issues of rabies control.

If you have any questions, you may contact Yolo County Sheriff's Department Animal Services at 530-668-5287 or the Yolo County Environmental Health Department at 530-666-8646.

Now here's a tip!

by Jo Ann Derson

• "I find that my family eats more fruit and veggies as snacks when they are prepared and ready to eat. So, when I get home from the grocery store, I immediately cut up and prep all the fruit and veggies that need it, and store them in plastic containers in the fridge. They are easy to see and convenient to snack on." — R.C. in Oregon

• Battling mosquitoes? Here's a great tip from C.B. in Alaska: "If you are someone with skin sensitivities or just don't like the smell or feel of insect repellent, try this: In the palm of your hand, mix together unscented lotion and a few drops of lemongrass-seed oil. Rub it all over your skin. The bugs strongly dislike the scent, but it feels great and smells better than spray. It even works on pets! Just rub some on the backs of their necks."

• Use Styrofoam packing peanuts in the bottom of pots when planting. They aren't as heavy as rocks, and they do just as good a job.

• Ease the weekday-morning time crunch by planning your wardrobe on the weekend. Use a single hanger to gather everything you need for a smart, pulled-together look. Attach a plastic sandwich bag with accessories to the hanger with a clothespin, and you'll be dressed in minutes.

• To avoid a dirty-smelling hamper, place a single sheet of fabric-softener in the bottom of your laundry closet or in the hamper itself.

• "When my child stopped napping during the day, I had much less time to take care of household chores. So I started recording books on tape for him to listen to while I took care of a few tasks around the house. It's still quiet time, even if he doesn't actually go to sleep." — R.L. in Minnesota

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial

Better to ask permission than to beg forgiveness

It's going to cost over $100 million to build the planned new high school. There will be a shortfall. The district will have to scramble for ways to bridge the budget gap. And it will certainly want to reach into the pot, and use about $7 million in unused 1999 school bond monies, to help fill that gap.

These facts seem self-evident at this point, as all parties wait to see what the final cost figures are for the new school.

The trouble with the 1999 money is that it was sold to local voters as a bond measure to help fix up the "old" River City High School, and so, as several school board members have mentioned, there is a question of keeping a promise. Will voters mind if we use that money for the new school instead?

No, they probably won't. But you do have to ask. The question should already be headed to the first available local ballot as an "advisory" measure.

Good news:

The high school's journalism department and school newspaper are back this year, after a year-long absence.

The News-Ledger will again offer its support, including providing printing services. Look for a copy of the high school paper about once a month during the school year. But give the kids a few weeks to get "up to speed" first.

Letters to the Editor

The use of a threat

The news that the owners of Conaway Ranch are negotiating the sale of the ranch to Yolo County only illustrates that the threat of eminent domain is just as powerful as the use of eminent domain. Yolo County taxpayers urge the Conaway Ranch owners to continue the fight to protect Yolo County farmland from public ownership.

Yolo County still has the responsibility to hold public meetings to answer many outstanding questions related to public use of tax dollars, land use, water and flood control issues.

How will a debt ridden County afford to purchase and maintain a 17,300 acre ranch when they can't afford to maintain their current park system? Will general tax dollars be used to maintain the ranch? Are public tax dollars better spent on public safety, education and roads?

Is it appropriate for gambling profits to be used to purchase the ranch and can taxpayers be given assurances that with the local tribe serving on a county land use committee, that a new casino won't be built on the ranch's I-5 frontage property?

Until the County fully discloses the financial and legal risks of an unprecedented move for local government to own and manage a ranch, Yolo County taxpayers should continue to be weary of any public ownership of Yolo farmland.

Media should be biased now and then

Should the media ever be biased? This may seem to have an obvious answer, no the media should never be biased, always neutral and never takes sides. However the answer is not as clear as we think it is.

We often get upset with all the obvious bias in the media, constantly attacking one side and using kid gloves on the other. We get upset when the media blows out of proportion a story like Cindy Sheehan and her protest and yet ignores the thousands of other grieving parents who instead of attacking our president, support him.

I however believe there is a time for the media to be biased. The media as usual has it backwards. The time they don't show bias is when they should and the time they shouldn't be biased is when they are.

When dealing with local, state or national issues the media should not take sides or show bias. Using terms like pro-choice when it really means pro-abortion is one sample of bias. Identifying most Republicans as conservatives but only a handful of liberal Democrats as liberal is biased. Even referring to hard working non-union workers as scabs is extremely derogatory and biased. Using the term activist to refer to people on the left but never the activists on the right is biased. To take the side of one political party and opposed the other is biased. To refuse to do research on candidates of one political party and then search through even private adoption records of the other is biased.

To date we have seen every record, even the phony forged ones, about President Bush's military service and we still have not seen most of the military records of John Kerry. The biased media pounded on President Bush and pounded on John Kerry's detractors, but they ignored John Kerry and the people constantly attacking President Bush. It is very clear that our mainstream media is not neutral and is very biased towards the political left.

However there is one area where our media should not be neutral and should show bias. Not bias towards a political party but rather bias towards America. I remember after 9-11 that everyone, politicians, fire fighters, accountants and other common ordinary people were proudly wearing American flags. However one group was conspicuous with their empty suit lapel, the media. When they should have taken the side of America they remained neutral, as if the terrorists were the same as our soldiers, as if there was no difference between the American leaders and the terrorist leaders, as if both sides had equal footing.

During WWI our media was relatively neutral in local issues but very biased in international issues and very pro-American. In WWII we saw the same thing, a very biased pro-American media. They didn't report training disasters where 1800 Americans died before D-Day. They didn't do body counts and casualty reports. The media didn't treat Tojo and Hitler the same as they treated Roosevelt, even though they were all equal leaders in one sense. We don't have that anymore. To our biased media Yasser Arafat is the same as Jimmy Carter, even though one was a president and the other a terrorist. Ted Kennedy is the same as Qusai Hussein even though one is an elected senator and the other the son of a brutal dictator. The biased media even treats President Bush with the same respect as Osama Bin Laden, where one is the leader of the free world and our president while the other is terrorist scum. To say that any of these comparisons is fair is to show blinders to truth.

On local and national issues the media should be neutral, searching for the truth, not showing bias and being fair and impartial. However on international issues I would expect the media to show a bias in favor of America, their home and ours.

TEST DRIVE by Greg Zyla

2005 Honda Accord Hybrid
Base price: $31,990
Price as tested: $32,505

This week, we test-drive Honda's 2005 Accord Hybrid sedan. Somewhat different from the other hybrids we've tested, the Accord is fitted with a powerful 255-horsepower, 3.0-liter V-6 engine that works in tandem with the motor-assist battery setup.

The Accord Hybrid is a great car to drive. Because it has so much power, we never encountered any situations on the road where it felt "underpowered." That's not the case with other hybrid subcompacts.

Honda Hybrid engineers hope consumers will appreciate the extra power and weight Accord offers while accepting lower fuel-mileage numbers. Simply put, the Honda gets 29 mpg city and 37 mpg highway, which isn't that great when compared with competing lightweights, where 50- to 60-mpg numbers are common. However, Honda has many pluses on its side.

The Accord's hybrid system is also different and very creative. It places an electric motor smack between the gas engine and the five-speed automatic transmission and boosts battery power only when necessary, such as merging onto a 65-mph freeway, scaling a steep grade or passing a slower vehicle. It also functions as a generator, charging the batteries during deceleration and braking. Most ingenious is the fact that Honda's variable cylinder management shuts down three of the V-6's six cylinders when not needed, meaning that just three cylinders are utilized while cruising the freeway. This is how Honda ends up with a car that is more fuel efficient, pound for pound, than any other car out there.

The cabin is fitted with luxury features like leather trim, dual-zone climate control, heated front seats, tilt and telescoping steering, 16-inch alloy wheels and a great sounding AM/FM/XM Satellite stereo with in-dash six-disc CD player. Of course, all the expected safety features are included at no extra charge, including drive-by-wire throttle system; anti-lock braking; electronic brake distribution; traction control; dual-stage, dual-threshold front airbags; front-side and side curtain airbags with passenger-side Occupant Position Detection System.

Size and weight, however, are Accord's most positive safety factors. Unlike its first Hybrid — the lightweight, two-seater Insight — Honda's Accord is a 3,501-pound car that offers more safety in steel mass alone. Additionally, the 107.9-inch wheelbase assures a nice, smooth ride. Underneath, a double-wishbone front suspension couples with a five-link double-wishbone rear suspension for sure-footed, sporty handling.

2005 Honda Accord Hybrid

Likes: All that horsepower, great highway mileage, Accord looks and reliability.

Dislikes: None. We gave it a 10.

Important numbers include 11.2 cubic-feet of cargo space, a 17.1-gallon fuel tank that offers better than 550 miles between freeway fill-ups, and room for five.

In summary, everyone who thought hybrids had to be "slowpokes" to deliver great gas mileage can stop complaining. This Accord Hybrid accelerates from zero to 60 mph in just 7.5 seconds while still delivering 37 mpg if driven properly.

Thus, we are bestowing one of our rare 10s (on a scale of one to 10) on Honda's new Accord Hybrid. Well done, Honda.

CRITIC'S CORNER By D.N.A Smith

"March of the Penguins"

Running time: 80 minutes
MPAA rating: G

"March of the Penguins" is the best family film of the year. I can't remember the last time I went to the theater and saw small children simply transfixed by what they saw onscreen and so emotionally involved in a film that wasn't a cartoon or an overblown videogame posing as a film.

This gorgeous documentary will make you laugh, cry and jump in your seat for joy as you experience the lives of these majestic and almost-human birds.

French filmmaker Luc Jacquet and his crew spent 14 months in Antarctica documenting the yearlong mating cycle of an emperor penguin colony.

When you consider that there are only 40 colonies left on earth and only four that have been studied by humans, this alone is a great achievement. Add to that the harsh conditions for the landlocked, marooned film crew, and the simply breathtaking photography that resulted, and "March of the Penguins" is more than a great documentary — it is a historic achievement.

Narrated by Morgan Freeman, we follow the colony from February to February as the males and females travel 70 miles over the forbidding frozen wastes to the place where they were born, choose a mate, take turns caring for the egg (the male's job) and then feeding the hatchling (the female's job). Timing is critical. By the time the females return to meet their newly hatched young, the males have lost one-half of their body weight and must trek 70 miles to the sea to feed and bring back the next meal for their babies.

And then, we watch as the cute hatchlings — fat, fluffy and funny — face dangers of their own as they grow old enough to return to the sea so the cycle of life can turn full-circle.

I can't recommend this film enough. If you watch only one movie with your family this year, make it "March of the Penguins."

Strange BUT TRUE

By Samantha Weaver

• The world's first commercially produced electronic digital computer, known as UNIVAC, came out in 1951. It weighed eight tons and could perform 1,000 calculations in a single second. That may seem paltry compared with today's computers, but at the time it was the fastest processor in the world. The cost was $250,000 — quite a princely sum in those days — and the first one was purchased by the U.S. Census Bureau.

• Those who study such things claim that a hamster can hold up to half its weight in food in its cheek pouches alone.

• Ronald Reagan, the 40th president of the United States, was also something of a wit. It was he who observed, "Politics is not a bad profession. If you succeed there are many rewards, if you disgrace yourself you can always write a book." He also once remarked, "It has been said that politics is the second oldest profession. I have learned that it bears a striking resemblance to the first."

• Here's yet another item to add to the extensive list of the vagaries of the English language: The phrases "fat chance" and "slim chance" mean the same thing.

• Chewing gum can be hazardous to the health, evidently. An Australian man named Abner Kriller was chewing gum while driving one day, and, as many people do, he blew a large bubble. Unfortunately, when the bubble burst, the gummy mess stuck to his glasses, causing Kriller to run off the road and down a steep hill, killing him instantly.

• The Caspian Sea isn't actually a sea; it's officially classified as a lake — the world's largest. And it's five and a half times as big as the world's second-largest lake, Lake Superior.

Jill Jackson's HOLLYWOOD

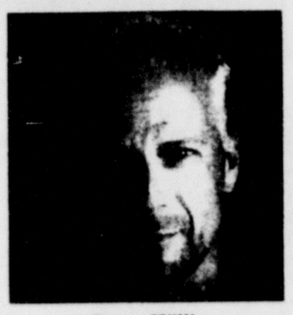
HOLLYWOOD ... All of a sudden things are getting busy in the business. Nicole Kidman's next will be "Invasion," about a mysterious epidemic that alters human behavior. Kidman plays a psychiatrist who discovers the origins to be extraterrestrial. She then must fight for her son, who seems to hold the key to stopping the invasion. Wonderful the way the beauteous Nicole can hop from light comedy to musicals to deep drama, changing her looks, personality and characterizations for each role. Would that her love life could be as secure as her career.

Little Haley Joel Osment is now a young man, and his next movie will be "Home of the Giants." This about a teenager in an Indiana town that lives for basketball. The teen and his friend are befriended by the town's basketball star, who turns out to be anything but the hero he was thought to be. Of course, you remember Haley Joel's Oscar-nominated performance in "The Sixth Sense."

And the big news still is Julia coming out from mommyhood. Not to the big screen, but to the Broadway stage in "Three Days of Rain." But this will not happen until next March and will run for only 12 weeks. It will be interesting to see how Mrs. Moder "comes over" live and on-stage. And you can bet your last dollar that Phin and Hazel will be in matching buggies somewhere backstage.

Richard Gere is presently shooting "Hoax," about author Clifford Irving, who sold a fake bio of Howard Hughes and caused a media frenzy back in the '70s. When this wraps he goes into "Flock," about a federal agent training a young female replacement, and while doing this he is also tracking a missing girl connected to a paroled sex offender. He doesn't sing or dance in either of these. Too bad. As to Richard's private life, it's just that. Very private. Always has been.

Samuel L. Jackson will star in and produce "Afrosamurai," about a samurai warrior who travels the world seeking revenge on those who murdered his father when he was a young boy. This one a ways into the future with a



Bruce Willis

2007 release date. As to his private life, you probably know he is married to LaTanya Richardson and that they have a daughter, Zoe.

No matter where, when, whenever — if Bruce Willis is in the audience and there's a band on stage, you can bet Mr. W. will hop on and join them. Hopefully he will be in the audience when Eddie Zip and his Sweet Magnolia Band play Jaeger's House of Seafood and Jazz in San Francisco. Zip and his Sweet Magnolias are leaving The Big Easy's French Quarter to play the City by the Bay for one month. If you're in the vicinity starting Sept. 2, drop in and tap your toes to the music and join in with Zip and the fun.

Aside to Brenda T. of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.: Again, forgive me, but I can't answer all these questions about what Angelina does, because I don't know the "whys." This time, "Why does she adopt foreign babies when so many in America need homes?" Believe me when I say Miss J. is not easy to ask. One must go through P.R., personal managers, agents, and then they will not give an answer.

BITS 'N' PIECES: That was Ben Affleck eyeing "baby stuff" in the window of a kiddie shop down by the water in Malibu. ... Cybill Shepherd "doing" the Sunset Strip nightclubs. My informant didn't recognize who she was with, but she boogied with the best. ... No Paris? Nyet!

CHEESE BLENDS FLAVOR THESE ITALIAN DISHES

Grating and shredding cheese can be a nuisance, especially when there's other prepping to be done. It's a job I like to push on to someone else. Fortunately, food companies are ever on the alert, and packaged ready-to-use grated, shredded and cubed cheeses have been available for years.

Among the newest are Sargento's Bistro Blends packed in resealable bags. We have a couple of recipes using two of the blends.

Italian Bread Pudding is not a dessert. It is, in fact, an excellent and unusual side dish. Served with a green salad, it can also double as a luncheon main dish. Flavoring it is a mix of tangy, sharp Asiago — its bite mellowed by sweet, mild mozzarella — with roasted garlic giving the blend an added flavor boost.

The Milan-Style Chicken and Spinach is flavored with Bistro Blend Mozzarella with Sun-Dried Tomatoes and Basil. A small serving of pasta with a plain tomato sauce makes a nice accompaniment. Or, top undressed vermicelli or angel hair with the spinach and chicken, and crown the whole thing with the chopped tomato and cheese blend.

ITALIAN BREAD PUDDING

- 1 can (14-1/2 ounce) pasta-ready or Italian seasoned diced tomatoes, undrained
- 1-1/2 teaspoon dried basil or oregano or 3/4 teaspoon each
- 1/4 teaspoon crushed red pepper flakes or freshly ground black pepper
- 4 cups cubed Italian bread (about 4 oz.)
- 1-3/4 cups (7 ounces) Sargento Bistro Blends Mozzarella & Asiago with Roasted Garlic Shredded Cheese, divided
- 2 teaspoons chopped fresh

WASHINGTON NEWS ITEMS

The Sacramento River registered two feet four inches U S gauge at the Southern Pacific bridge yesterday.

Whether the property owners of Yolo County are satisfied or dissatisfied with the work now being done in the Sacramento River fronting the town is a question that must be threshed out by the interested parties at a later date. The work has been started of digging a channel in the Sacramento River just north of the Southern Pacific bridge as far as the mouth of the American River. During two weeks a great dredger has been at work moving sand from the channel to the western side of the stream and there banking it to be washed down by the first winter freshets that come along. Apparently the channel is being dug at the Sacramento side of the river to save the intake of the filtration plant, but while that intake is being saved the intake of the Washington water works is being greatly endangered. The hill of sand now practically extends from Rocky Point to a point about halfway between the mouth of the American River and the Southern Pacific bridge. As a consequence the current of the river cannot reach the intake of the Washington water works and therefore only stagnant water is being pumped into the mains of the town of Washington. Chlorine is being used by the Washington water works to kill bacteria in the water supply, but if the condition continues there is danger of an epidemic, for no amount of chlorine can slaughter the bacteria in stagnant water. This question will be taken up by the Washington Boosters' Club next Tuesday evening in the town hall, and relief will be sought either from the National Government or from the State health authorities.

J. J. McNally, owner of the West Side Auto Camp, returned from Fresno last Saturday where he had been looking after personal interests which he owns in that locality. He has ten acres of wine grapes of a very good variety that demands a high price, and because his crop is of first-class character he is jubilant over the prospects he holds for returns this year. McNally has practically bargained to sell his wine grape crop for $100 a ton.

Owing to the change in the subway from Fifth Street to a point under the Sacramento Northern Railroad about 500 feet west, McNally and Partridge are about to start construction on another service station, immediately fronting the new subway. The new station will be modern in every detail. It will have all the latest conveniences for quick service and a wide stock of goods will be placed for the use of motorists. The service station now in use will still be maintained in its present locaton.

Word comes from Mrs. Joe Pereira that she is rapidly improving at her place of retreat in the mountains and may be expected to be at her home in Washington soon. She has greatly recovered from the nervousness under which she was laboring, but is forced to remain to recuperate for some time to come.

Larkin Mosher was a visitor last Sunday at Nevada City and other points in Nevada County. A few local friends accompanied him to the mountains.

"A roaring business" is the term used by the West Sacramento Auto Camp in declaring that business is good at the present time at the camp. Every night every cabin and parking space is taken and frequently tourists are driven away for lack of space.

F. L. Maule, a groceryman in the West Sacramento Auto Camp, is rejoicing in increased business and looks for a great influx during the State Fair and for some time after.

Bob Taylor and Tom O'Connor are two new men that have been placed at work by the firm of Fraser and Doyle at the Washington Service Station. Owing to the fact that Fraser and Doyle have opened up their new service station at 12th and H Streets at Sacramento the old men who had been serving in Washington were moved to the new locality.

A decision was rendered last Tuesday by Judge Barry in the claim of A. Lopes against C. E. Hansen in the amount of $50. Lopes sued Hansen because the latter had failed to make returns on the sale of two calves, and the evidence was so palpable that Judge Barry did not hesitate to render a decision immediately. The amount will be paid in monthly installments by Hansen.

Ed Moss and Bob Beale returned from Tia Juana and Coast points last Wednesday evening after an absence of two weeks, but, strange to say, neither one of them brought along anything extraordinary that could be seen, although before they left they promised to surprise their friends by returning with some of the movie actresses at Hollywood. They had a splendid trip, spending their time at such places as best suited them, but mostly in Los Angeles, San Diego, Tia Juana and other fashionable resorts. They took in the races and won some money, too, at Tia Juana. They took in the town and won some of the girls, and they had good beer that tasted like some of the old Gilt Edge that used to be around Sacramento. The cafeterias in the southern part of the State were a revelation to them. Accustomed as they are to good grub and plenty of it, they were astonished how some of the Eastern people could manage to live and get along on what they ate at the cafeterias at Los Angeles. Being flush with lots of funds they didn't hesitate to take in everything, and one thing that they particularly enjoyed was the acting of Charlie Chaplin at his Hollywood studio in the play, "The Rush Days of '49." Traveling for two weeks in their Dodge roadster, they experienced no trouble whatever with the car and this fact added no little to the pleasure of their trip. Both were greatly benefforces in the moving picture business.

Central California Development Company Organized To Take Charge of Affairs of Westgate

With a capitalization of $500,000, of which $500 is subscribed, the Central California Development Company has taken hold of the affairs of the Westgate Company with the intention of pushing the district to an early maturity, a quick prosperity.

Articles of the corporation were filed with the Secretary of State on June 13th, and while the main office of the corporation at that time was located in San Francisco, it will be located in future in Westgate or West Sacramento.

At a meeting of the incorporators held last Friday in San Francisco, T. D. McAnulty was elected president and J. P. McAnulty secretary-treasurer.

A resolution was adopted at that meeting also making the California National Bank depository to replace a San Francisco bank that has been the depository up to this time.

The Central California Development Company is a closed corporation, with no stock for sale, and although the articles of incorporation declare that only $500 has been subscribed the balance of the funds for all the shares of stock are being held in escrow and are available even at this time.

The directors elected at the meeting last Friday were: Thomas Allen, San Francisco; G. M. Jones, San Francisco; A. E. Herring, San Francisco; T. D. McAnulty, Westgate; J. P. McAnulty, Westgate, and Philip I. Manson, who was named chairman of the board of directors.

The holdings of the company consist mostly of land in the West Sacramento District or Reclamation District 900.

The company also hold 55 1-5 per cent of the capital stock of the Marin Investment Company of Santa Venetia, a summer home colony near San Francisco.

It also holds a large portion of the stock of the Lee Investment Company of Oakland. It also has properties in Los Angeles, Pasadena, Arcadia and Temple, California, with prospects of oil development at Arcadia.

The principal offices of the Central California Development Company will be located in West Sacramento, but a sub-office will be maintained in San Francisco.

J. P. McAnulty, speaking to the Independent yesterday, said that it was the intention of the corporation to actively promote the interests of Westgate and to go ahead with immediate building activities that will make the dstrict one of the most active suburban districts around Sacramento.

Ample funds are available for immediate development.

M STREET BRIDGE BADLY IN NEED OF RESURFACING

Owing in great part to the great traffic that is now crossing the M Street bridge, the surfacing of the roadways at either side is becoming badly broken up.

Indeed, the surfacing on the westbound side is in such poor repair that sometimes auto drivers are in danger, and the great bumps and ruts are, to say the least, very disagreeable.

In addition to the regular traffic that crosses the bridge, the contracting firm of J. R. Reeves in Sacramento is hauling great truck loads of sand from a point on the river levee in West Sacramento to Sacramento. The sand is being hauled in five-ton trucks and this traffic has materially broken up the surfacing of the M Street bridge.

Yolo County contributes $500 per year for the maintenance of the bridge. Sacramento County contributes a like amount or more for the maintenance of this bridge, yet nothing in the shape of material repair has been done by the Short Line electric road during the past year to keep the surfacing in condition.

From what the Independent understands, the M Street bridge has been already condemned by the War Department as being unsafe and unfit for the heavy traffic that now rolls over it. The Independent does not make this assertion with positiveness, for it has only heard a report to that effect.

Some slight repairs costing very little would place the bridge in passable condition, but if it is permitted to deteriorate as it has been deteriorating during the past three months there is liability of trouble.

WASHINGTON MAY BECOME GRETNA GREEN WITH JUDGE BARRY

Last Thursday, August 13th, Judge Barry performed his first marriage ceremony.

Although the date seemed inauspicious, the 13th, a young couple of Sacramento could not wait and selected Judge Barry's courtroom for the ceremony because of its sedate surroundings, its quiet conduct and its exclusiveness.

Clarence Renny Esparcia was the groom, 25 years of age, with his home at the Clunie Hotel at Sacramento.

Frances Krim, 19 years, was the bride.

The ceremony was witnessed by Romeo Bertero and by Anna Chabdaris.

Many other couples have approached Judge Barry to perform the wedding ceremony, but on informing them they must procure a license at the County Seat first they went to Woodland, with the result that he has missed many marriages which were intended for his courtroom. As a matter of fact, the county authorities take good care to steer young couples to the Justice Court in Woodland to be married.

Don't believe a man who says he never had a chance.
He means he never stole any money.

NOT ONE CRIMINAL CASE BEFORE JUDGE BARRY IN A WEEK

Although more damnation has been visited on the town of Washington during the past week than has ever before been visited on it, not a single arrest was made by Constable Wilson and not a single criminal case was before Judge Barry's court.

Yet withal, Washington was denominated as a nesthole of perdition, "Hell's Garden," by Chief of Police Koening of Sacramento.

And this denomination was given the town before one of the luncheon clubs of Sacramento where everything is so pure, and clean, and white, and moral that the angels look on and weep.

Many of the residents of Washington made complaint to the Independent about the manner in which the town "across the river" has been treated. The best citizens of the community acknowledge that Washington is not an elysium, but they also acknowledge and will wager that Washington is no worse than Sacramento or is not even as bad as Sacramento.

Bums, dope fiends, canned heat fiends, narcotic users and other derelicts are driven across the bridges by one hundred policemen in Sacramento. These derelicts find an easy way out of town, out of Sacramento, by crossing the two bridges.

One peace officer alone, Constable Wilson, must look after all these derelicts, and that is an absolute impossibility for one man.

Sheriff Monroe has given generously of his time and his services in trying to prevent these derelicts from making their headquarters in Washington. He has spent a great deal of his time in Washington on account of its proximity to Sacramento and he has aided the Sacramento police force materially in trying to rid this locality of the miscreants who are an eternal annoyance to the police force of Sacramento.

It is a safe bet that the population of Washington will compare favorably in morals with the population of Sacramento, and on that account the names that have been hurled at Washington by police authorities of Sacramento are not received with any kind of good will, but, on the contrary, are resented with force.

The Independent has not talked with Chief of Police Koening on the matter, but an interview granted by the chief and published in the Woodland Democrat is interesting. It reads:

"Broderick is so closely situated to Sacramento that we are going to do everything we can in an effort to clean it up," Koening told the Democrat. "Men are being plied with rotten liquor in the town, and it is for the good of humanity as well as for enforcement of the law that I am going ahead with the work of assisting to clean it up.

"Liquor is being made in Broderick, I am almost certain. Several days ago three men were arrested here and paid total fines of $750 on charges of possession of illicit liquor. All three were from the Broderick district and brought their liquor from the Yolo County side.

"Several deaths have been reported from men drinking the stuff, and I see another one occurred in Woodland just a few days ago. THE MAN STATED HE PURCHASED THE LIQUOR IN SACRAMENTO, ACCORDING TO NEWSPAPER REPORTS, AND WE ARE MAKING EVERY EFFORT TO DETERMINE THE SOURCE HERE, AS WELL AS ACROSS THE RIVER.

"Statements in Sacramento newspapers regarding the conditions there WERE SOMEWHAT EXAGGERATED AND INTIMATED THAT I WAS CASTING A REFLECTION ON THE AUTHORITIES OF YOLO COUNTY FOR NOT KEEPING CONDITIONS IN BRODERICK AS CLEAN AS

CLARKSBURG FERRY OUT OF COMMISSION, LAID UP FOR REPAIRS

In last week's issue of the Independent attention was drawn to the necessity of more bridges across the Sacramento River, particularly in the vicinity of Washington and Sacramento.

At the present time a petition is before the Board of Supervisors of Yolo County and Sacramento County for the construction of a bridge at Clarksburg.

Another petition is before both boards asking the construction of a bridge at Freeport.

The question will be decided at a meeting to be called early in September, but the likelihood is that the War Department will have final say as to the location where a bridge will be built, either at Freeport or at Clarksburg.

Last Sunday the Clarksburg ferry broke down completely. It started to leak so badly that it became dangerous and Supervisor Buckingham ordered it sent to Pittsburg for repairs.

This is particularly unfortunate at this time of the year, when great quantities of farm products are moving out of the Holland District either to Sacramento or shipping points on the Sacramento River.

Farmers are put to a great deal of inconvenience in being forced to haul their products either to the Freeport ferry or the Hood ferry.

And both these ferries are not in the best kind of condition and the approaches to them are far from being samples of convenience or safety.

The retirement of the Clarksburg ferry will go a long way in prompting the supervisors of Sacramento and Yolo counties to decide in building a bridge at some convenient point, either at Freeport or Clarksburg or at some point intermediate.

SALES IN WESTGATE CONTINUE ACTIVELY

With the return of T. D. McAnulty today from San Francisco and Oakland, renewed activity was manifested in Westgate.

Yesterday Tracy Austin bought a lot in the district on which he is about to build a home. The lot is located on Netherlands Blvd.

Thomas Lawrence purchased a lot in Westgate during the past week, on which he is about to start building a home. Mr. Lawrence has a patent on an oil burner which he intends to promote and may purchase a factory site wherein to manufacture the burner.

G. M. Jones and Joseph Peltier spent last Tuesday in Westgate looking over the affairs of the district.

Bryan tried to make capital out of free silver.
And he wound up with monkeyshines.

LORD & BISHOP LOW BIDDERS ON SUBWAY

Bids for the construction of a subway at West Sacramento, Yolo County, were opened Monday by the California highway commission as follows:

Lord and Bishop of Napa were low bidders on the undergrade crossing in Yolo County under the Sacramento Northern railroad at West Sacramento, just west of the M Street bridge. The subway will have a 30-foot roadway, and, in addition, a five-foot sidewalk. The Lord and Bishop bid was for $21,258; engineer's estimate, $26,005.

Some people think "there is nothing new under the sun."
But did you see the new zone markers on the streets in Sacramento?

Some people think that this age is a hopeless one.
Oh, no. Ten-year-old boys are not yet getting married.

ADULT BEVERAGE

2004 Dancing Coyote Albarino

We found this gem at this year's California State Fair. Fragrant aromas of lime, melon, and Bartlett pear, with a lively blend of citrus and apple flavors in the mouth. We were surprised to learn that this wine had only received a Silver Medal at the State Fair; it was definitely a "Gold" in our book. 750 ml. Bottle
